Get your facts straight before you mouth off.

Fact is as you and they both have now stated "they" had issues with talent that has nothing to do with affiliates and if this was the case "they" should have notified affiliates rather than abusing DMCA for this purpose.

You are nothing more then a grade a TWAT who abuses copyright protection law for the wrong purposes. Which this case in my consideration was about shaking down an affiliate for personal gain and neither you nor your client bring evidence to the table which proves otherwise. You can say whatever and make all the excuses you and your client would like but im anything but the tool many of us already know you to be. Just be lucky im not billing your sorry ass for making frivolous claims and wasting my time dealing with your bullshit.

Do I need to avoid programs using this removeyourcontent service?

I thought it was a decent service but if he's riding I$ cock and defending their actions, then he is definitely more harm then good. I'll be asking a few owners tomorrow about it, that answer was so fucking stupid it floors me.

Who knows, maybe they enjoy his lipservice better then my sales.

I thought there were other issues with I$ that encouraged affiliates to avoid them.

Well this guy does not browse forums as i've stated elsewhere. Although he is watching since being clued in about the existence of forums like ADX. Also as surprising as it is he was pushing others including Score Cash but never was able to convert a sale. Where he says I$ in all fairness has actually made him sales month after month and always paid. To this day he said he still has banners up for Score and others but wont build anymore pages or try to send them more traffic because they have never converted for him.

Wow, I cannot believe I just read the above statement. Either you are not well informed or you believe everyone in this industry to be a complete moron. I assure you it is not the later.
